

John Johnson

User Story/Scenario: Finding a Movie to Review

John Johnson sits at his desk, using his smartphone to decide on a film.

He uses an app to search for movies by genre, rating, and release year.

He browses through search results and finds a new thriller that looks interesting.

John Johnson sits at his desk, using his smartphone to decide on a film.

John Johnson critiques another's review of the movie based on his notes.

Back at his desk, he writes a review of the movie based on his notes.

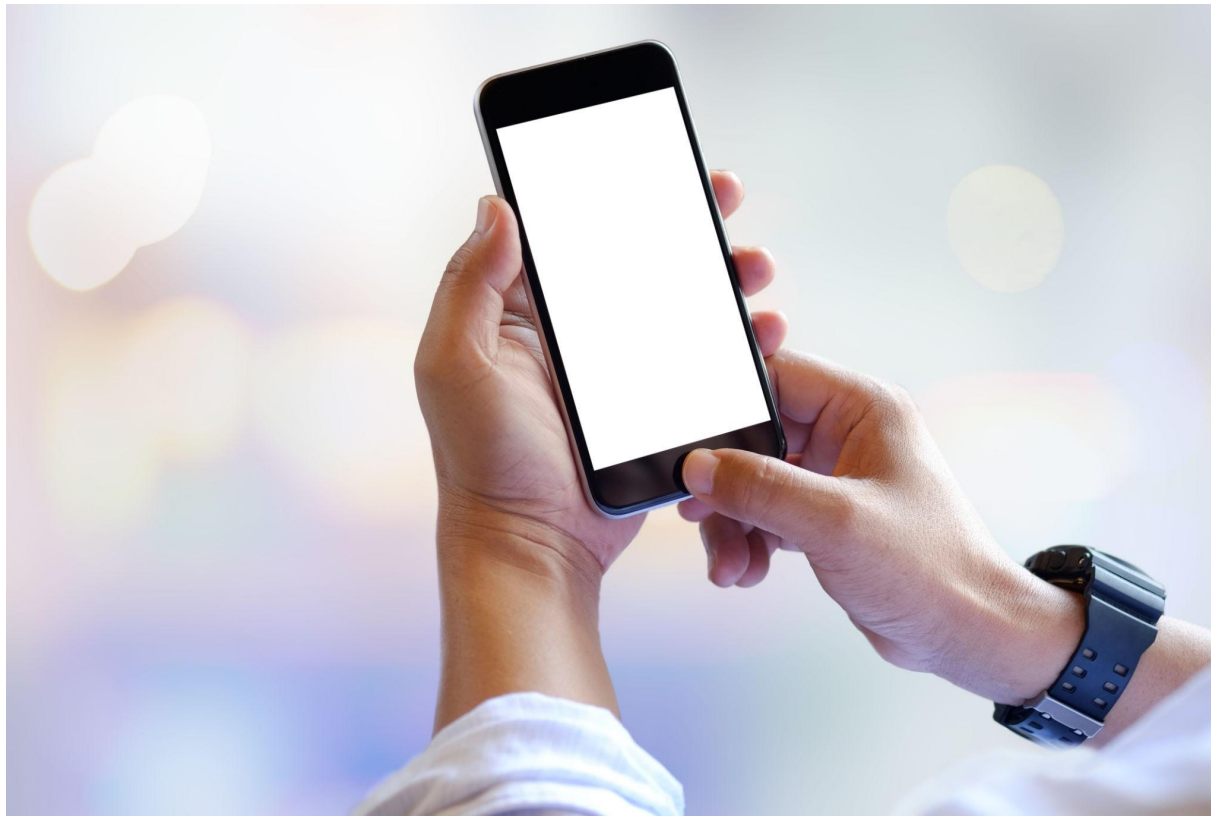

Jacob Klutz is a 30 year old HR professional that lives in Chicago. He loves spending quality time with his wife.

Jacob likes to spend time relaxing and watching movies with his wife after a long day at work.

Jacob and his wife have a hard time finding movies that they would both enjoy without taking too much time to search for one so they download a new app called Movie Findr.

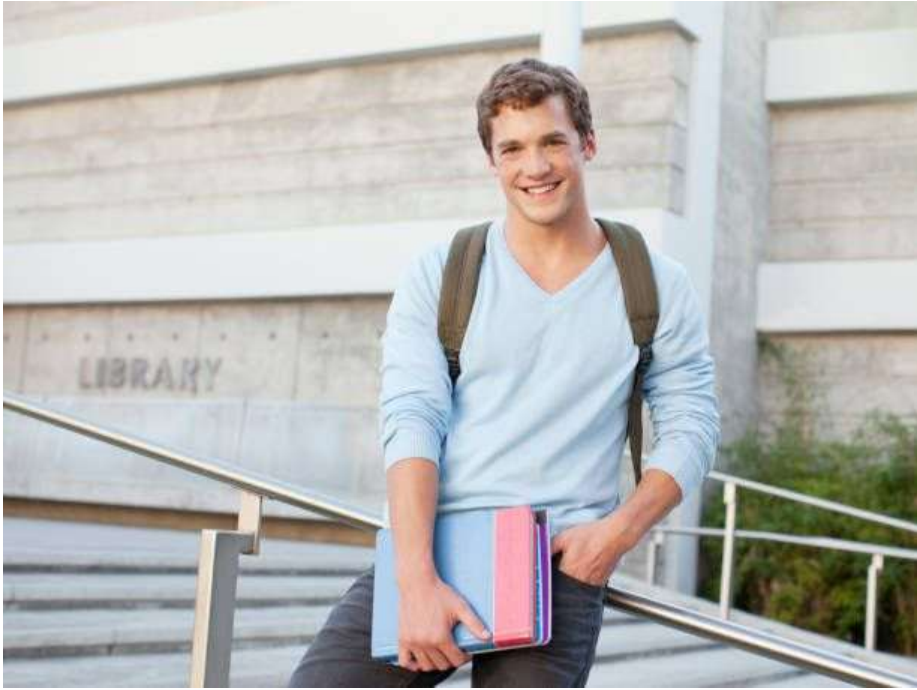

After a long day at work, Jacob decides to put the app to use and find a movie for him and his wife to watch.

He quickly inputs his and his wife's different preferences and gets a movie.

They watch the movie and find that it was suited to their tastes and decide to continue using the app.

Student is a USC student who has a strong interest in movies and spends much of his free time watching and analyzing films.

Student has a strong passion for movies and is determined to watch as many niche films as possible.

One of Students friends told him about this app called “movie findr” that helps you find random movies and where to watch them.

Student downloads the app Movie Findr and begins exploring different movie recommendations tailored to his interests.

shutterstock.com • 2258422157

Using Movie Findr, Student discovers new movies he has never seen before and easily finds where they are available to watch.

Thanks to Movie Findr, Student is able to watch more movies than ever and continues working toward his goal of watching as many films as possible.